KEYNOTE SPEAKER

THOMAS GALATI

CHIEF OF INTELLIGENCE, NYPD INTELLIGENCE BUREAU

Chief Thomas Galati, a member of the NYPD since 1984, is the first to serve as the Chief of Intelligence for the New York City Police Department. Prior to becoming the head of the Intelligence Bureau, he served in a variety of roles throughout the Patrol Services Bureau, and the Detective Bureau and the Intelligence Bureau.

Chief Galati holds a Bachelor's Degree in Criminal Justice from the State University of New York. He is a 2003 graduate of Columbia University's Police Management Institute, and is a 2011 Graduate of the Harvard University, John F. Kennedy School of Government, and Senior Executive Course.

Throughout Chief Galati's career, he received recognition from the NYPD on numerous occasions, most notably with the Medal of Valor in 1989. Additionally, he has been honored by several foreign police agencies, including the Green Cross from Spain's Guardia Civil and the Conspicuous Service Medal from the Australian Federal Police. In 2011, he received ADL's prestigious William and Naomi Gorowitz Institute Service Award, which salutes outstanding achievements in combating terrorism, extremism and injustice.

NYPD Intelligence Primer:

The mission of the NYPD Intelligence Bureau is to detect and disrupt criminal and terrorist activity through the use of intelligence-led policing. In combination with traditional policing methods, uniformed officers and civilian analysts in the Intelligence Bureau collect and analyze information from a variety of sources in order to advance criminal and terrorist investigations.

NYPD Intelligence operations are divided by functional responsibility: Intelligence Operations and Analysis Section (IOAS) and the Criminal Intelligence Section (CIS). The objective of IOAS is to thwart potential terrorist plots. To that end, IOAS deploys seasoned investigators and civilian analysts to collect, synthesize, and analyze information about individuals or groups believed to be engaged in unlawful activity.

CIS fulfills a similar function in the criminal realm and likewise comprises investigative and analytic cadres. Another critical component of CIS is the Field Intelligence Officer (FIO) program. FIOs are ranking uniformed officers deployed to each NYPD precinct, where they collect and disseminate criminal intelligence information in order to support narcotics, firearms and other criminal investigations, ranging from simple short-term cases to complex long-term ones.

As head of the Intelligence Bureau, Chief Galati directs the coverage of every presidential visit and coordinates a detailed security plan with hundreds of domestic and international agencies during the United Nations General Assembly. Additionally, during Pope Benedict's visit in 2010 and Pope Francis' visit 2015, the Chief ensured their safety by devising appropriate police presence, security, and response. Chief Galati is also responsible for dignitary and executive protection around the city, including assuring protection of political leaders and the security of mayoral residences, City Hall, and Gracie Mansion.

Through its International Liaison Program, the Intelligence Bureau posts officers in law enforcement agencies in major cities around the world. These liaisons support the NYPD by providing situational awareness and exchanging best-practices related to policing with local agencies. Similarly, members of the Intelligence Bureau in New York work closely with federal, state, and local law enforcement partners to keep the city safe.

The Intelligence Bureau's investigative activities are conducted in accordance with rules established pursuant to a federal court decree.
