No Place for Hate® Coordinator Handbook & Resource Guide 2022–2023
About ADL

ADL is a leading anti-hate organization. Founded in 1913 in response to an escalating climate of antisemitism and bigotry, its timeless mission is to stop the defamation of the Jewish people and to secure justice and fair treatment to all. Today, ADL continues to fight all forms of hate with the same vigor and passion. ADL is the first call when acts of antisemitism occur. A global leader in exposing extremism, delivering anti-bias education and fighting hate online, ADL's ultimate goal is a world in which no group or individual suffers from bias, discrimination or hate.

A leader in the development of materials, programs and services, ADL builds bridges of communication, understanding and respect between diverse groups, carrying out its mission through a network of 26 regional offices in the United States and abroad.

ADL's education department provides educational programs, training and resources. Our anti-bias and bullying prevention programs for grades Pre-K–12 (A World of Difference® Institute and No Place for Hate) assist educators, students and family members in understanding and challenging bias and building ally behaviors. Our work in confronting antisemitism (Words to Action™ and BINAH) empowers middle school, high school and college students with constructive responses to combat antisemitism. Our Echoes & Reflections program helps students explore and critically reflect on the lessons of the Holocaust.

About ADL Education & The No Place for Hate® Initiative

ADL Education is inspiring a generation to challenge bias in themselves, others and society in order to create more inclusive learning communities.

No Place for Hate is a collaborative initiative that provides Pre-K–12 schools with an organizing framework for students, administrators, teachers and family members to develop long-term solutions for creating and maintaining an inclusive and equitable school climate. The No Place for Hate framework helps schools to:

- Build inclusive and safe communities in which respect and equity are the goals and where all students can thrive.
- Empower students, faculty, administration and family members to take action against bias and bullying by incorporating new and existing programs under one powerful message.
- Send a clear, unified message that all students have a place where they belong.

The No Place for Hate® registered trademark is the sole property of ADL and at all times must be used only with the permission of ADL and in a manner consistent with the goals of this initiative. Please consult your local ADL office before using the logo in your school’s program and materials.

Welcome

Dear Education Community:

Welcome to the No Place for Hate® Resource Guide! It has been over 20 years since No Place for Hate began, and we are still going strong in over 1,800 schools across the nation. Through student voice and leadership, we have seen schools tackle issues of bias, bullying and injustice in a variety of ways. Among a diverse set of school sizes, locations, demographics and projects, all of our schools have something important in common: they all engage in meaningful and ongoing dialogue around these challenging issues.

Additionally, the COVID-19 pandemic has significantly impacted the ways we live, work and learn over the past couple of years. Schools have been deeply impacted not just by remote learning but by interrupted learning and increased rates of bias incidents, especially online. ADL recognizes the uncertainties schools are facing and is committed to supporting schools in continuing the ever-important work of challenging all forms of bias to create inclusive school environments. And that is exactly what this resource guide is all about—helping support schools on their No Place for Hate journeys with useful resources and strategies.

ADL understands that promoting sustainable, positive change in school climates is a continual journey rather than a final destination. Implementing the No Place for Hate program will not eliminate every instance of bias and bullying but will provide a framework and helpful resources for schools to address these issues head on. Each new school year brings new challenges and opportunities to assist schools in fostering an inclusive, respectful and equitable school climate for all students. Despite all of the evolving challenges over the past couple of years, ADL commends schools across the nation for prioritizing students’ need to feel safe, respected and welcomed—whether in a school building or in virtual learning spaces.

Thank you for your commitment to providing your students with the opportunity to create a school that values the strength and depth that diversity brings. Together, we can make the places where we live and learn No Place for Hate.

Hanover Park High School

How has No Place for Hate impacted you and/or your school?

No Place for Hate has impacted our school in a very positive way. Our motto at Hanover Park High School is "We Are Family", and although we have our differences, in the end, we can come together as a community and speak up and stand up against bullying, bias, racism, sexism, homophobia etc. I think the most important thing is not to just tolerate peoples’ differences, but to learn about these differences and really understand and accept everyone for who they are.

What do you think is the biggest challenge in making schools No Place for Hate? How have you overcome that challenge?

The biggest challenge at Hanover Park is reaching every student, due to the sheer size of the high school. We have 801 students at the school, and coming up with activities that reach all of them, especially the discussion aspect, is very challenging. I think the same could be said for schools with larger populations and/or regional districts. The ERASE Club students are wonderful in wanting to make a difference at school and developing ideas to reach the student body. I would be remiss if I left out the teachers who have been very helpful with assisting me with the message and program, as many of them voluntarily run clubs such as the GSA/SAGA Club, Spanish Club, to just to name a few!

What advice would you give to someone who is considering joining the No Place for Hate movement?

My advice to other schools considering joining the No Place for Hate movement is, of course, go for it! As an advisor, it is important to reach out to the student body to find students that are passionate about the topic of fighting bullying, racism, sexism, bias etc., and tap into their ideas and creativity.
GETTING STARTED
How to Become a No Place for Hate® School

Over twenty years ago, in 1999, ADL used research and experience to design a self-directed program that effects positive changes in school climates. Since then, thousands of schools across the country have followed the steps below that are required to achieve the No Place for Hate designation.

Register.
Please complete our request for information form at www.noplaceforhate.org/join-movement/. You will then be contacted by your regional ADL office with instructions on how to register for No Place for Hate. Once you have completed registration, you will receive everything you need to make your school No Place for Hate.

Form a Committee.
Select a coalition of students, at least two faculty and/or staff, administrators and family members (optional) to lead your No Place for Hate efforts throughout the year to promote respect, equity and inclusion for all.

Introduce the Pledge.
Kick off the year by using the No Place for Hate pledge as a conversation starter with students across the school on what it means to create an inclusive school. These conversations are a great way to introduce your school community to the No Place for Hate program.

Implement Schoolwide Activities.
Develop and implement schoolwide activities that enhance students’ understanding of diversity, bias and inclusion and learn ways to foster equity and harmony in your school community. Activities should be spread throughout the school year (e.g., one in the fall, winter and spring). Please see page 19 for more details about what constitutes an approved No Place for Hate activity.

Submit the Paperwork.
Submit all of the required paperwork (e.g., activity forms, pledge process, lesson plans, photos, videos, etc.) for approval. Reach out to your local ADL Education team for more information about submission requirements throughout the year.

Celebrate your Designation.
Congratulations! Once ADL reviews your paperwork and confirms that you have completed these steps, your school will be designated No Place for Hate for that academic year and will be awarded a banner to commemorate this milestone.* Banners should be displayed prominently in your school (e.g., main office, front entrance) to demonstrate your commitment to being No Place for Hate, and digital banners can be posted on the school’s website. Be sure to mark your calendar for No Place for Hate Day on Thursday, May 11, 2023, to join No Place for Hate schools across the nation in sharing your incredible efforts on social media using #noplaceforhate.

* Schools must reapply each year to continue to be designated No Place for Hate.
Recommended Best Practices

Although not required, we strongly recommend you include these best practices as part of your No Place for Hate efforts.

Review Making Your School No Place for Hate.

Making Your School No Place for Hate is an interactive, self-paced course to help you jumpstart your No Place for Hate journey. This 45-minute experience can be paused so that you can pick up where you leave off. You can also revisit this as needed. Be sure to check out the toolkit of resources and ideas linked at the end of the course, which you can find here: https://adl.org/education/NPFHCoordinatorCourse/.

Survey Your Students.

Climate surveys are a great way to amplify student voices and make students feel that they are active participants in creating a school culture where everyone feels welcomed and supported. Survey data can also help you design activities that focus on the most important diversity and equity issues in your school. Our experience has shown that schools implementing surveys report greater program buy-in among students overall. Many schools already implement surveys and already have data at the ready that can be useful for No Place for Hate planning. No need to reinvent the wheel.

Implement ADL Anti-Bias Curriculum.

ADL has three anti-bias curriculum guides (elementary, middle and high school) that provide sequential lessons to help students in grades K–12 build a strong foundation for analyzing and confronting bias. These lessons are a great way to reach the entire student body consistently throughout the school year through regular classroom instruction, required classes and/or dedicated advisory periods. To learn more about the curricula, please visit www.adl.org/anti-bias-curriculum/.

Prepare School Staff for Implementation.

ADL's open-source content provides useful tools to prepare school staff for the implementation of No Place for Hate. You can access our open-source resources at www.adl.org/education/. We recommend starting with our educator mini-lessons that address the four pillars of Anti-Bias Education. The On-Demand Mini-Lessons can be found at https://www.adl.org/demand-learning.

Host an ADL Workshop.

Schedule one or more of ADL's interactive anti-bias and bullying/cyberbullying prevention workshops as a supplement to your No Place for Hate activities. Some workshops can be counted as No Place for Hate activities depending on the number of people trained and how they share their learning with the whole school community. These workshops are incredibly helpful in creating a useful anti-bias foundation for the students and committee members leading No Place for Hate. Learn more about ADL programming opportunities on page 43.

Support for Incident Response.

As one of our No Place for Hate partners, we know that you are working hard to build and maintain a positive school environment, and part of that effort is addressing incidents of bias and hate when they occur. ADL is here to support you and your school community when navigating incidents of bias and hate. Please feel free to contact your local ADL office when incidents of bias occur so that we can support you (page 44).

* ADL reserves the right to revoke No Place for Hate status, or decline to award No Place for Hate status, to any school that, in ADL's sole discretion, has failed to adequately address incidents of bias and/or bullying that may arise or has failed to operate in a manner consistent with ADL's values and/or mission.
Building and Maintaining Your No Place for Hate® Committee

A strong No Place for Hate committee is the foundation for creating sustainable, positive change in your school’s climate. It is important to consider the ratio of students to adults, make sure the committee represents the demographics of your school community and decide how often the committee will meet, in what ways the committee will meet and what role the committee will play throughout the year. Below are a few tips to help you build a strong committee.

Recruiting Committee Members

You should have at least one No Place for Hate coordinator, although we highly recommend two coordinators to help share oversight. Additionally, your committee should have several students, one administrator, one additional school staff member, and optionally one or more parents or community members.

Begin to create buy-in by presenting to faculty and staff about No Place for Hate, ensuring that everyone understands how this program helps meet your school’s values and priorities. Continue by distributing information about No Place for Hate in several ways (email, social media, website announcements, virtual classroom postings, etc.) in the communications you send to families and students at the beginning of the school year, including clear expectations for participation. Have a dedicated method for students and family members to express interest in joining the committee (e.g., Google form, email reply, etc.). Establish a committee membership agreement; it is essential to provide clarity about the time commitment and communication expectations involved with participation.

How, When and Why the Committee Will Meet

We recommend creating a consistent schedule for meetings at the beginning of the year so all members understand the time commitment of joining the committee. ADL requires that the committee meet at least enough times during the school year to plan your activities and reflect on their impact. Beyond that, you can choose to convene subcommittees to discuss specific tasks as needed. To ensure that all committee members know what is expected of them, ADL recommends that a committee agreement be established by the first meeting date. In this document, you can include the schedule of meetings, where those meetings will take place and guidance for participation. We also recommend having specific agendas for each meeting that engage committee members and allow them to share any progress with each other.

Select a method of communication that works for all committee members. Below are options for tools to connect with committees both virtually and remotely.

Virtual Engagement (all students have access to devices and internet):

1. Use a messaging app.
   Messaging apps are a great way to engage with families and students online. Common Sense Media has a great list of options that you can review here. Most apps have a free option for educators.

2. Explore a learning management system.
   Learning Management Systems (LMS) are tools for educators to connect with families and students, deliver online courses, track student progress and so much more. It is possible your school was already using an LMS system prior to the pandemic, but if not, there are a variety of options for educators. Google Classroom, Flipgrid, Moodle, Sutori and Microsoft Teams are great places to start. These systems provide options for live interaction as well as discussion boards for committee members to interact on their own schedule.

Remote Engagement (all students do NOT have access to devices and internet):

1. Use a messaging app that does not require data.
   While many messaging apps use data, there are some that work similarly to a text message. Remind is a resource used by many schools to keep in touch with students and families. This can be a great way to connect to your committee provided members have cell phones and can receive text messages.

2. Create a Phone Tree.
   Phone trees used to be the primary method of communication prior to the availability of computers and the internet. This can be used to keep the committee informed about activity planning and options throughout the year.

3. Post flyers around the school.

   Note: If your school or community is struggling to provide internet access and devices to all students and you are interested in receiving assistance, consider contacting the nonprofit organization EveryoneOn. EveryoneOn’s mission is to connect under-resourced communities with affordable internet services. In light of the COVID-19 health crisis, EveryoneOn has created a tool kit for schools and districts.

Engaging Your Committee

The committee is responsible for planning and implementing everything related to No Place for Hate (e.g., presenting the pledge; developing, choosing and implementing activities; submitting your school’s work to ADL, etc.). We recommend laying out the specific goals and tasks that the committee will be responsible for so your time together is productive and efficient. One way to do this is to divide your committee into subcommittees that are each responsible for implementing one specific task throughout the year (e.g., getting signatures for the pledge, activities, etc.). We also think it is important to celebrate the great work your committee will be doing.

For schools that may experience disruptions to typical on-site learning, consider the following ways to bring your committee together online:

- Meet through video or conference calls.
- Share agendas on a Google Doc and set deadlines for comments and questions from committee members.
- Meet in smaller subcommittees that focus on different pieces of No Place for Hate at your school.
- For elementary student committee members, have them choose a preapproved activity from our No Place for Hate sample activities (p. 27) and introduce it to the school.
Presenting the No Place for Hate® Pledge

The No Place for Hate pledge is an essential kickoff at the beginning of the year. It rallies your school’s stakeholders to commit to doing their part to make your school No Place for Hate. Use the pledge as a way to present the program to your school and begin your work for the year. Engage your committee members in this kickoff by brainstorming creative ways to present the pledge, such as:

- Make a banner or artwork out of the pledge to hang in a prominent location on campus.
- Complete individual classroom projects, such as classroom posters.
- Present the pledge as part of a schoolwide assembly or pep rally.
- Have students present via video or morning announcements and lead brief discussions in every homeroom.
- Provide an opportunity for students, faculty, staff, administrators and families to sign on to the pledge as a demonstration of commitment to this work. (Please note that ADL does not collect signatures.)

Consider how your committee’s students can engage their peers in discussions about what the pledge means to them. The following questions can help your committee or your teachers assess your school climate and identify focus areas for your No Place for Hate efforts:

- What parts of the pledge stand out to you? Why?
- What parts of the pledge are strong points in our school?
- What parts of the pledge are areas for our school to work on?

Remote/Virtual Pledge Event Considerations

If you are planning to present the pledge virtually, consider mixing and matching the following methods to actively engage the whole school community:

- Use Flipgrid to create a video gallery of students reciting the pledge and/or talking about what the pledge means to them.
- Have students submit artwork of their own No Place for Hate banner or a part of the pledge that speaks to them. Give a variety of options for submission (email, virtual classroom, text, etc.).
- Create a social media campaign and a hashtag for students to share why they are taking the No Place for Hate pledge.
- Have your committee create a video that explains what the pledge means to your school and ask all students to share in their virtual classrooms which part means the most to them and why.

The possibilities are endless, so get creative!
The No Place for Hate® Pledge

Elementary School

- I promise to do my best to treat everyone fairly.
- I promise to do my best to be kind to everyone—even if they are not like me.
- If I see someone being hurt or bullied, I will tell a teacher.
- I will help others to feel safe and happy at school.
- I will be part of making my school No Place for Hate.

Middle/High School

- I will seek to gain understanding of those who are different from me.
- I will speak out against prejudice and discrimination.
- I will reach out to support those who are targets of hate.
- I will promote respect for people and help foster a prejudice-free school.
- I believe that one person can make a difference—no person can be an “innocent” bystander when it comes to opposing hate.
- I recognize that respecting individual dignity and promoting intergroup harmony are the responsibilities of all students.

La Promesa de No Place for Hate® (Español)

Escuela Primaria

- Prometo hacer mi mejor esfuerzo para tratar a todos de manera justa.
- Prometo hacer lo mejor para ser amable con todos, incluso si no son como yo.
- Si veo que alguien está siendo herido o acosado, se lo diré a un maestro.
- Ayudaré para que los demás se sientan seguros y felices en la escuela.
- Contribuiré para que en mi escuela no haya lugar para el odio/No Place for Hate.

Escuela Secundaria y Preparatoria

- Buscaré comprender a quienes son diferentes de mí.
- Me expresaré en contra del prejuicio y la discriminación.
- Me acercaré y apoyaré a quienes son objetivos de odio.
- Promoveré el respeto hacia las personas y ayudaré a fomentar una escuela libre de prejuicios.
- Creo que una persona puede hacer la diferencia—ninguna persona puede ser un espectador “inocente” cuando se trata de oponerse al odio.
- Reconozco que respetar la dignidad individual y promover la armonía entre los grupos es responsabilidad de todos los estudiantes.

Activity Guidelines

Each year, we at ADL are inspired by the creativity and care that goes into the development and implementation of schools’ No Place for Hate activities. We see students across the country being asked to examine their identities, reflect on their biased behaviors and learn new ways to challenge bias and bullying in themselves, others and society.

Below are the required guidelines that all activities must follow in order to qualify as a No Place for Hate activity. The goal is to challenge all students to think critically, instill a sense of empathy and empower students to act as allies for one another.

Implementation tip: Consider using ADL Education resources or our No Place for Hate activity library as the basis for your activities. If you do, consider the different ways that you can engage your committee in leading the implementation of these resources and preapproved activities.

- ADL Education resources: http://adl.org/education/
- No Place for Hate activity library: https://www.adl.org/no-place-for-hate-activity-library/

Note for schools that experience COVID-19 disruptions: If your school has the access and bandwidth to implement schoolwide activities either in person or online, please continue to do so. If disruptions to typical on-site learning make the implementation of schoolwide activities with active discussion challenging, please reach out to your regional ADL office to determine what works for your school. We acknowledge that there are different obstacles for each school and want to ensure reaching a No Place for Hate designation is not only achievable, but equitable.

No Place for Hate Activities Must:

- Involve students in the planning and implementation.
- Focus on inclusivity and community-building.
- Involve all students in active learning.
- Involve all students in discussion.
- Address school-based issues focused on addressing identity, bias and/or bullying/cyberbullying.
- Take place throughout the school year, with activities spread out over time (e.g., one in each season: fall, winter and spring).

No Place for Hate Activities Should Not:

- Include introduction of the pledge, which does not count as an activity because it is a separate step to earn your school’s No Place for Hate designation.
- Be done by only one classroom or a small group of students unless that group then engages the rest of the student body in a way that follows the activity guidelines.
- Use only passive learning (e.g., watching a speaker without an opportunity to process what has been taught in a follow-up discussion or lesson).
• All take place over one week (activities that take place over one week can be submitted as one activity).
• Engage in activities that simulate historical atrocities, because such acts can trivialize the event. To learn more, please review the ADL Education resource "Why Simulation Activities Should Not be Used."

Why Discussion is Required

The success of No Place for Hate relies on the premise that all members of the school community have a voice in creating a plan that leads to lasting change. The foundation of that change is a strong coalition of school leaders (including students, educators and family members) who have a stake in the outcomes of the plan.

There are no more obvious stakeholders than the students. Too often, adults assume they know what is needed to support young people, but change can be elusive if we do not actively engage students in the process. One way to maximize engagement is through dialogue. This is why it is essential for No Place for Hate committees to create activities that amplify students’ voices and provide them with opportunities to participate in active discussion, whether during an activity or through follow-up discussions in the classroom.

Here are a few common prompts to help start the conversation during or after an activity:

• What is a word or phrase that describes how you feel about what you have learned?
• What is something you learned today that you did not know before?
• What do you think was the biggest class (or group) takeaway?
• What is something you will do differently because of what you learned today?
• How will what you learned influence how you behave toward others moving forward?

Facilitating a dialogue around topics of bias and bullying may seem daunting to some. Just remember that it is okay not to have all of the answers. What’s most important is to provide a space where students feel their voices are being heard, respected and valued. That is when real change can begin to take shape.

Move on From Kindness. Schools Need to Foster Social Justice.

Each year, ADL receives activities from participating No Place for Hate schools that focus on kindness. Although learning how to demonstrate kindness is an important part of a child’s psychological and social development, ADL highly encourages schools to move beyond kindness to social justice. Jinnie Spiegler, ADL’s Director of Curriculum and Training, explains why this distinction is important in the following article that originally appeared in Education Week.
We know kindness when we see it: someone performs a generous deed, listens with a sympathetic ear, offers a heartfelt compliment to a friend, family member or even a stranger. We see kindness promoted visibly through public awareness campaigns like Random Acts of Kindness, the Great Kindness Challenge and Choose Kind, linked to the popular children's book Wonder.

Conversations about kindness abound in schools and can be part of character education instruction as well as social and emotional skill development. The acts of kindness that take place in schools (e.g., holding the water fountain for someone, reading a book to a younger student, bringing a treat to someone, asking the teacher if they need help) are regularly encouraged, affirmed and applauded. Many parents feel it is their obligation to instill this trait in their children from a young age. Indeed, kindness is something our whole society can get behind—it is a worthy aspiration to raise children who are helpful, generous and caring.

Sometimes in schools and in society at large, kindness and social action get conflated. They are not the same. It is important to make the distinction because many schools hope to engage young people in social action work, yet mistakenly focus on kindness because they think it will lead to social justice outcomes.

Kindness, defined as being “of a sympathetic or helpful nature,” usually involves an action between one person and another. It’s typically a solo act. Social action, defined as “activity on the part of an interested group directed toward some particular institutional change,” generally involves a group of people who work together to bring about institutional change so that society advances and people experience improved safety, freedom and equity. Institutional or systemic change can take place in a school, a community or society as a whole.

The aftermath of the shooting at Marjory Stoneman Douglas High School provides a useful example of the difference between kindness and social action. The acts of kindness directed toward the survivors, victims and their families included notes of sympathy and concern, kind quotes, tree planting, coupons for free items and more. As this was taking place, the world watched as Parkland students engaged in social action and activism in order to address the root of the gun violence problem and to enact systemic change.

These actions included walkouts and protests, meetings with lobbyists and members of Congress; petitions, op-eds and letter writing; and deep engagement on social media and with the press and various media outlets. Further, they sparked activism in others, which shows how social action can be contagious and that the affected parties are not the only ones who should get involved.

While kindness can set a foundation for social action because it fosters empathy in young people and motivates them to help others, the two are not the same and action does not happen on its own. If we want young people to understand how to engage in changing systems and society, it is critical that adults encourage them to do so by providing opportunities to practice while imparting the necessary skills and knowledge. The first step is to facilitate students’ learning about the issues in a rigorous and complex way, and then to get them involved in action, advocacy and/or activism.

For example, if students are passionate about the problem of people experiencing housing insecurity, the tendency might be to have young people volunteer at a shelter or soup kitchen or read aloud to children who are housing insecure. These are wonderful activities that promote empathy and a sense of connection on a human level. But if we want children to consider how to transform the problem of homelessness, we need to help them understand the economic and social roots of the problem and consider ways to advocate for affordable housing and improved economic conditions for all people, especially those living in poverty.

Similarly, if students want to tackle the issue of educational equity, they can't stop at a helpful activity such as tutoring children. That will definitely help some individual children, but in order to affect systemic change, students need to analyze and challenge the opportunity—opportunity gaps, school funding inequities and the school-to-prison pipeline (to name a few). After that, they can consider ways to address those issues through policy and legislation, which can lead to local and national solutions.

We should teach, model and promote kindness as much and as often as we can. But we also need to teach and empower young people to engage in social action: that is the only way we can ultimately change societal inequities and bring about a truly just society.

Moving from Safe Classrooms to Brave Classrooms

In fostering inclusive, equitable and safe schools, we encourage educators to develop group guidelines for respect and safety in the classroom. However, there is often a need to go further and frame guidelines around the concept of bravery instead of safety.

There are a few reasons for this. While these group agreements work for some, they don’t always help everyone feel safe, respected or included. For example, people of color and/or those who are members of marginalized groups may want to share real and sometimes harsh testimony about their experiences, something they might need to do in order to feel included and be able to participate. They may want to caucus with others in their same identity group in order to feel safe. Or, they may feel that being able to challenge others’ bias is necessary to build empathy. Therefore, what they require to feel safe may not subscribe to the typical list of guidelines.

In diverse groups and especially when the goal is equity and safety for all, it is important to be aware that the word “safety” is open to interpretation, and how it is understood depends on the person. People may have different ideas about what it means to “feel safe,” “assume goodwill,” “participate fully,” etc. These different perspectives may be attributed to whether one is part of a marginalized or majority group in school or society.

Brave is defined as “having or showing physical, emotional or moral strength in the face of difficulty, danger or fear.” When you’re brave, you do something that is hard for you. In a classroom or group, bravery goes both ways—giving and receiving. A brave space is one in which we accept that we will feel uncomfortable and maybe even defensive when exploring issues of bias, injustice and oppression. A brave space is one in which we take risks, doing so with care and compassion.
Here are quick strategies for setting up guidelines for brave spaces/classrooms:

- Ask students to define bravery. You can use the definition above or come up with one that works for you and your students.
- Have students close their eyes and think of a time they felt brave; then ask them to share some of the images, thoughts, feelings and behaviors that came to mind. Alternatively (especially with younger students), you can have them draw something that reflects a time they felt brave.
- Have students talk with a partner (or share in concentric circles, if time permits) to respond to the following prompts.
  - What does being brave mean to you?
  - When was the last time you felt brave in school?
  - What do you need to feel brave in this classroom?
- Have students share their thoughts aloud or on Post-it Notes that you can hang somewhere in the classroom for all to see. From these conversations and shared thoughts, have students come up with a list of guidelines for being brave in the classroom.
- Make sure everyone agrees with the guidelines; you can get verbal agreement or have everyone sign a pledge or a classroom poster that lists the guidelines.

Here’s a list of possible guidelines for brave spaces/classrooms (keep in mind that it is best if the list is generated by the group):

- Be open to different and multiple viewpoints and perspectives, especially those that differ from yours.
- If people share experiences and feelings that are different or unfamiliar to you, show respect by taking them seriously, and understand the impact of your response.
- Explore, recognize and acknowledge your privilege.
- Even if you are uncomfortable or unsure, contribute and take risks.
- Make space by sharing speaking time; try to speak after others who have not spoken.
- Listen actively, even and especially when people say things that are difficult to hear.
- Find ways to challenge others with respect and care, and be open to challenging your own points of view.
- Work hard not to be defensive if people challenge what you say or the impact of your words.
- Commit to confidentiality and not disclosing what people say; at the same time, take responsibility for sharing important messages and themes outside the group or class. One way to think about this is: “stories stay, lessons leave.”

Let’s Get it Right: Using Correct Pronouns and Names

We use people’s pronouns and names frequently and in regular, everyday communication, both verbally and in writing. We do it almost without thinking. Because names and pronouns are the two most common ways people refer to others, they are personal and important. They are also key facets of our identity. Therefore, calling someone by the wrong name or misgendering them by using incorrect pronouns can be disrespectful, harmful and even unsafe.

From an early age, many were taught that pronouns should follow specific rules along the gender binary: “she, her and hers” for girls and women and “he, him and his” for boys and men. However, as our society has progressed in understanding gender identity, our language must also be updated. It should be accurate and convey understanding and respect for all people, especially for those who are transgender, gender nonconforming and nonbinary.

Because some people identify themselves as being outside of the gender binary (the idea that gender consists of two distinct, opposite and disconnected categories—male and female), it is important to make sure you know the specific pronouns people use, whether those pronouns are female, male or gender-neutral. Be mindful that the pronouns “he” and “she” come with a set of expectations and gender norms about how people express their identity. For many, these terms are limiting and confining, so gender-neutral options are preferable.

If you use the wrong pronoun or name, people may not correct you because they may feel awkward, uncomfortable or unsafe. If you don’t know what people's pronouns and names are, you can listen to how they or others refer to them, or you can ask. There are suggestions below about how to do this in a school or classroom setting.

There has been a much-needed movement away from asking for and identifying pronouns as “preferred.” For example, people used to ask, “What is your preferred pronoun?” This question is problematic because a person’s pronouns are not just “preferred”—they are the pronouns that should be used.

Using correct names and pronouns shows respect, acceptance and support to all students, especially those who are transgender, gender nonconforming and nonbinary. While some schools and school districts have specific policies on a range of issues regarding transgender and gender nonconforming students, below are practical tips and strategies for showing respect to students.

At the beginning of the school year or a new semester, many teachers distribute a “get to know you survey” to learn more about their students: how they best learn, their hobbies/interests outside of school, what they did over the summer, etc. You can add a question about pronouns such as: “What are your gender pronouns?” or “Which pronouns do you use?” You can also ask what name they use. This sends a message that you want to know their accurate name and pronouns, and it gives you the information you need to get it right.

You should also ask whether it’s okay or not to use their name and pronoun in communications home to parents/family members and in parent–teacher conferences. Keep in mind that some students may not have disclosed this information to some or all family members.
If you know students’ correct pronouns and names, use them in class and do not rely on “official” or roster information. You can act as a role model by sharing your pronouns and using them when introducing yourself. Be careful not to make assumptions about someone’s pronouns and name; at the same time, be sensitive to students who may not feel ready or comfortable to disclose this information. If you make a mistake in your use of names or pronouns, quickly self-correct and move on. Similarly, if another student or adult uses an incorrect name or pronoun, make the correction and continue the conversation. Don’t dwell unnecessarily on it, which could inadvertently make the student feel more uneasy.

If you do not address names/pronouns in a survey or another way, students may talk with you individually after class about their names or pronouns. Listen to what they say without judgment, ask clarifying questions and let them know you will correctly use their name or pronoun. As stated above, the best way to ask is: “What are your gender pronouns?” or “Which pronouns do you use?”

There are a few ways to start a discussion about the use of pronouns. Always be mindful not to single anyone out, and don’t engage in a class discussion if you feel it would increase the discomfort rather than minimize it.

One way is to have students read an article about the history of the pronoun “they” such as “A Brief History of Singular ‘They’ Even the staunchest grammarians are now accepting the singular, gender-neutral “they.”” Or you can have students read something like “Here’s Why Gender Pronouns Are So Important.” There are also short videos that can serve as conversation starters about pronouns such as Why Gender Pronouns Matter and Why Pronouns Matter for Trans People. After you read or watch, ask open-ended discussion questions like: What are your thoughts and feelings about what you read/watched? What did you learn that you didn’t know before? How are you thinking differently about this now? You could also assign a reflective writing assignment or a “quick write” to have students express their thoughts.

Always be aware that while students may share their pronouns and name with you, this doesn’t mean they have shared it with other teachers, students, friends or family members. And don’t share this information without express permission from the students themselves.

Below is a list of pronouns. This is not a comprehensive list, and other pronouns, or no pronouns at all, might be preferred by some transgender people. The correct pronouns for a person do not necessarily align with the associated gender identity or expression. Be mindful that cisgender as well as transgender, gender nonconforming and nonbinary people may use feminine, masculine or gender-neutral pronouns.

Feminine: She, her, hers
Masculine: He, him, his
Gender Neutral: They*, them, theirs
Gender Neutral: Ze, zir, zirs
Gender Neutral: Ze, hir, hirs

* Many dictionaries have recognized “they” as a singular pronoun for years, including the Oxford English Dictionary, Merriam-Webster’s Dictionary and dictionary.com.
Sample Activities

For No Place for Hate activity ideas, you can check out our online No Place for Hate Activity Library. It is a collection of elementary, middle and high school activities that qualify toward your No Place for Hate designation. All the activities are linked to one of our free online lesson plans and include a range of activities and opportunities for discussion. And best of all, every activity has been preapproved by the ADL. For more information, visit www.adl.org/no-place-for-hate-activity-library/.

In addition to the Activity Library, we have listed below some sample activity ideas categorized by topic and indicating appropriate grade levels, including ideas for virtual activities. Please remember that it is your school's responsibility to tailor each activity to meet the No Place for Hate Activity Guidelines found on page 19. Make sure that students are able to participate in discussion and active learning around the chosen theme or topic. If you have any questions, please contact your local ADL Education staff if you have already registered. For registration inquiries, please fill out our online form at https://www.noplaceforhate.org/join-movement/.

Explore Identity

“I AM …”
Grade level: Elementary School

Lead a discussion with students about similarities and differences between people. Talk about the importance of respecting people's differences. Give the students a piece of paper and ask them to draw a picture of themselves that shows aspects of their identity (e.g., physical traits, identity groups to which they belong, talents, hobbies, etc.). All of the self-portraits can then be collected and put together to make one giant collage for the hall titled “Diversity = Strength.”

PEN PALS: SIMILARITIES AND DIFFERENCES
Grade Level: Elementary/Middle School

Start by connecting your school with another school, either in the same district or in another part of the country (ADL may be able to help you with this). Assign pen pals across the schools and have students write letters to each other where they learn about each other, especially focusing on the aspects of identity that make them unique: where they live, what their school is like, their race, ethnicity, religion or other aspects of identity they want to share. For elementary students, you can kick the activity off by reading a book like Same, Same but Different or Dear Primo. For younger students in grades K–2, allow for students to exchange drawings instead or write their letters with the help of a family member or older student. For middle school students, you can also kick if off with a book to read (check Books Matter) that explores identity; students can start their pen pal discussions by talking about the book and their connection to the book as it relates to identity. Or, you can match the middle school students with elementary students in the same community and have them read together while getting to learn about each other.
“HUMANS OF ...” INSTAGRAM CAMPAIGN

Grade level: Middle School/High School

Inspired by the “Humans of New York” campaign, lead a discussion with students about different aspects of identity (e.g., race, religion, language, gender/gender identity, sexual orientation, etc.). Following this discussion, create a student-led team that will interview students about aspects of their identities and post one of those interviews daily with an accompanying picture on your school’s Instagram account. Interviewers should encourage people to share an aspect of their identity and could include the variety of languages represented at your school, where appropriate. Be sure to get permission from students to post and monitor the Instagram account to respond to any negative or biased feedback.

PERSONAL IDENTITY THROUGH THE LENS OF THE HOLOCAUST: WHAT RIGHTS ARE MOST IMPORTANT TO ME?

Grade level: High School

Studying the rise of the Nazi Party requires students to reflect on the importance of preserving and protecting democratic values and institutions and consider their role as a responsible citizen in that process. Through the lens of the Holocaust, students will consider the rights that they have and will consider how losing those freedoms might impact their personal identities. In this activity, students will consider the importance of protecting democratic values and institutions, and their role as responsible citizens in this process. They will identify the historical events that allowed for a dramatic change in social policies in Germany between 1933 and 1939. They will consider the importance of their own rights and examine how the Jewish population of Germany experienced the erosion of these rights.

Interpret Differences

WHEN I GROW UP

Grade level: Elementary School

Lead a discussion about stereotypes using ADL’s lesson “Mo’Ne Davis and Gender Stereotypes” (link below). As an extension to the lesson, ask students to think about ways in which stereotypes impact how people treat each other in their school. Are kids of different genders treated differently? Are students treated differently on the basis of race? If so, explain more. Ask students to share a time that they were discouraged from doing something because of an aspect of their identity. Finish the activity by giving each student a piece of paper and asking them to draw a picture of possible jobs/professions they’re interested in pursuing when they grow up. Encourage them to think big, even if it’s something that society says they shouldn’t be. Collect the students’ drawings and post them in a prominent place in the school as a reminder to challenge stereotypes. Have a small group of older students read books to students in the younger grade classrooms (Pre-K–1) that share the themes of how important it is to allow people to be who they are and follow their dreams.

YOU ARE WELCOME HERE

Grade level: All Grades

Lead a discussion with all students about immigration and refugees using ADL’s curriculum unit “Huddled Mass or Second Class: Challenging Anti-Immigrant Bias in the U.S.” (link below). As an extension to the lesson, ask students why it’s important to learn about the stories of immigrants and refugees in connection with making their school No Place for Hate. Do they see a connection between the experiences of immigrants and refugees to the U.S. and those of new students in their school? What are the similarities? What if those new students are immigrants and refugees? Brainstorm ways to make new students feel welcome and announce that the school will be starting a welcoming committee to oversee the implementation of these ideas. Allow students to sign up to join the committee. (Be mindful that you may have students or family members in your school who are documented and/or undocumented immigrants or refugees who may or may not know or disclose that information. Do not highlight individual students or families; do be sensitive to privacy concerns.)

LISTENING JOURNAL

Grade level: Middle School/High School

Have students keep a listening journal for one week. As they listen to the people in their lives and to messages in the media (including social media), have them record in journals examples of stereotypes, bias and discrimination that they experience, see and hear about throughout the week. Lead a discussion about their observations and the impact on their school culture. In response, have students create an Allyship Board to share allyship strategies for students and staff to use to challenge the biased attitudes and behaviors that impact their school.

Supporting ADL Resource/Lesson Plan: https://www.adl.org/education/educator-resources/lesson-plans/identity-based-bullying
WORD SLAM
Grade level: High School
Lead a discussion with all students around the topic of microaggressions using the lesson below. Based on that discussion, have every student create original poetry, spoken word performances or raps that challenge the microaggressions they may have heard in school or while hanging out with friends. Each class can then pick their favorite piece to be featured at a schoolwide Word Slam. Invite participants to present their work at PTO/PTA meetings, school board meetings or other school community events.

ALLY COLLAGE
Grade level: Elementary School
Lead a discussion about bullying and explore what ally behavior looks, feels and sounds like. As a follow-up to this conversation, have each student draw one ally behavior they commit to doing more of in the future. Have each student present their drawing to the rest of the class and tape it to the other drawings so all the drawings come together in a collage. Stress with students the importance of being interconnected with their peers. This collage can be displayed in a prominent place in the classroom or school.

FROM BYSTANDING TO SUPPORTING
Grade level: Middle School/High School
This multiday activity begins with a classroom discussion that defines what bullying is and what it is not (see definition on page 50), then moves into a discussion about the behaviors that people exhibit in bullying incidents with a focus on “bystanding.” Conclude this discussion by asking students and teachers to write on a blank notecard about a time that they observed a bullying incident but didn’t support the target, why they didn’t support the target and how it made them feel to be a bystander. Collect all of the notecards and display them in a place in the school where everyone can see them. Complete this activity with a second classroom discussion on a different day about ways to support targets of bullying. Conclude this discussion by having students and teachers write on blank notecards one way that they will commit to supporting targets of bullying (acting as an ally) in the future. Collect all of the notecards and display them on top of the notecards already displayed in the hallway.

TREE OF RESPECT
Grade level: Elementary School
As stated on page 20 of this guide, ADL urges No Place for Hate schools to go beyond kindness, which explores the idea that a person can be kind to someone (e.g., hold the door open for someone, ask a teacher if they need help) without showing them respect (e.g., not playing with someone because of their gender, making fun of someone’s lunch because it looks different). Lead a discussion with students about the topic of respect. What is it? Is it the same as kindness? How are they different? Why should we focus on respect rather than only kindness? Once students have a clear sense of the importance of respect, brainstorm ways in which people can show respect to one another. Give each student a piece of construction paper to trace their hand and then have them cut out their hand outline. On the hand, have them write one thing they can commit to doing to demonstrate respect for others in their school. Collect the “hands” and place them like leaves on a tree in a prominent location in the school as a reminder of everyone’s commitment to respect one another.

#THATSNOTFUNNY
Grade level: Middle School/High School

Lead a discussion about the topic of biased or offensive “jokes” using the ADL lesson below. Allow students an opportunity to explore the differences between teasing and offensive jokes/slurs and the impact of those slurs on individuals and the school’s climate. As a follow-up to the conversation, ask students to come up with hashtags that they can use to challenge biased comments online and in person.

INTENTIONAL ACTS OF RESPECT
Grade level: Middle School/High School

Respect can mean many things to many people; the Oxford English Dictionary defines it as “the consideration for the feelings, wishes, rights or traditions of others.” Lead a discussion around the topic of respect. What is it? What does it look like? What does it feel like? What does it sound like? Follow this discussion with an opportunity for students to rate how respectful their school is by standing at a point along an imaginary continuum between the words “Disrespectful” and “Respectful.” Have students then share their experiences and explain why they chose to stand where they did. Continue the conversation by asking students to brainstorm ways that people can show respect at their school. As a follow-up, provide notecards to each student and explain that for one week, they will have an opportunity to recognize students or faculty members for committing Intentional Acts of Respect by recording the “Who, What, Where, When & How” of the respectful action on a notecard and dropping it in one of the designated boxes throughout the school. Read some of the notecards during morning announcements and post them on a featured wall for all to see.

PROPAGANDA AND MEDIA LITERACY: THE HOLOCAUST AS A CASE STUDY

Grade level: High School

This activity will focus on propaganda and media used by the Nazis during the Holocaust. This activity will help to situate media literacy in Nazi propaganda, and students will be encouraged to examine both the intentions of the media they use and encounter and their own role in consuming media in today's information-saturated world. Students will examine propaganda using media literacy skills and will examine multimedia assets including the correlated visual history testimonies and other primary resources and materials. Students will identify opportunities to connect the lessons of the Holocaust with more current examples of hate propaganda. Students will understand the correlation between propaganda and ideology.

Champion Justice

MAKING THE INVISIBLE VISIBLE

Grade level: High School

Using the lesson below, lead a discussion about the ways in which LGBTQ people, events and issues have been less visible or made invisible in mainstream accounts of history. Explore the impact of invisibility on people and how different groups have been historically excluded and marginalized in society. Then, engage students in a discussion about people who may feel invisible in their school. Be sure to focus on general identity characteristics (e.g., sexual orientation, immigration status, gender identity, etc.) rather than specific individuals. Based on this discussion, ask students to sign up to be interviewed if they feel like an aspect of their identity needs more visibility. Help students create interview questions. Decide how the interviews will be recorded (e.g., audio, video, etc.) and compile the completed interviews into your school's own StoryCorps library.

PARTICIPATE IN ADL’S WALK AGAINST HATE

Grade level: All Grade Levels

You can create a No Place for Hate activity by planning, participating in and following up on ADL’s Walk Against Hate. Together with all members of the school community, plan to participate in the Walk Against Hate. Involve members of the larger community including businesses, non-profit organizations, corporations, houses of worship, etc. Plan activities, signage, fundraising, social media, chants/songs, etc. After the event, assess how it went, what you accomplished and what follow-up steps you plan to take to keep the message strong throughout the year.

Learn about the Pyramid of Hate:

- Middle/ High School Mini Lesson: Students can complete themselves through an online platform (https://www.adl.org/education/resources/tools-and-strategies/the-pyramid-of-hate-student-edition)

Learn more about Bullying Prevention/ Identity-Based Bullying:

- Student Mini-Courses - Our mini courses for young people are 45 minutes or more, delving deeper into topics around bias and bullying that impact their everyday lives (https://www.adl.org/student-learning).
- Identity Based Bullying Lesson plan for Elementary and Middle School Students - Learn about the roles people play in bullying and strategies to be an ally (https://www.adl.org/education/educator-resources/lesson-plans/identity-based-bullying).

Teaching students about ableism and its impact:

- "The Present" and Living with a Disability - This lesson provides an opportunity for students to watch and reflect upon the film, learn more about people with disabilities and create their own comic strip based on the film or another story about a person with a disability. (https://www.adl.org/education/educator-resources/lesson-plans/the-present-and-living-with-a-disability).
- Living and Playing with a Disability - This No Place for Hate Activity provides students with an opportunity to reflect on the short film, "The Present." They create a comic strip that highlights a part of the story that resonates with them. (https://www.adl.org/living-and-playing-with-a-disability).

You can also look for ideas for a follow-up activity in the No Place for Hate Activity Library linked on the top of page 27.
Virtual Activities

ONE BOOK: ONE SCHOOL (VIRTUAL ADAPTATION)

Grade level: All Grade Levels

Choose a book from ADL's Books Matter library to read as a whole school. For an elementary school, the chosen book could be a picture book that teachers can read to students directly via video. Once students have read the book, engage in small group discussions about the book's themes. Ask questions of students about the identity, diversity, bias and bullying themes the book addresses. Use the book discussion guide to engage in a follow-up action. This can be creating a piece of art to be shared, a short, written response or a comparison to another book.

Supporting ADL Resource/Lesson Plan: https://www.adl.org/one-book-one-school/

JUST LIKE ME (VIRTUAL ADAPTATION)

Grade level: All Grade Levels

Representation means different things to different people. On a video call, walk students through the meaning of representation and ask them to think about their own identities. How have people with their identities been represented in the media (games, TV shows, movies, apps, books, toys, etc.) they consume? Ask them to think of a character they love who represents them in some way and share why that representation matters to them. For younger grades, this can be as simple as sharing a picture of a character who represents an aspect of their identity with one word about why. For older students, a paragraph explaining why that character represents them could be hosted in a social media collage or in a school group chat.

Supporting ADL Resource/Lesson Plan: https://www.adl.org/education/educator-resources/lesson-plans/on-screen-diversity-why-visibility-in-media-matters

MANY FAMILIES (VIRTUAL ADAPTATION)

Grade level: Elementary School

On a video call, talk to students about the different types of families. Ask them to reflect on who is in their family or other families they know. What does a family look like? What are some common characteristics of families (they may live together, they love each other, they help each other, they share a home and resources)? Ask a couple of volunteers to share their reflections. Consider that families can have a variety of identity characteristics including races, genders, ages, parents (i.e., same sex, adoptive or foster parents) and structures. Explain that in your school, there is a lot of diversity in types of families. Emphasize that all types of families are awesome and valid. Ask students to draw a picture of what their family looks like and invite volunteers to share on the call or in a shared space what makes their family interesting and unique.

“I AM ...” (VIRTUAL ADAPTATION)

Grade level: Elementary School

Over video chat, lead group discussions with students about similarities and differences between people. Talk about the importance of accepting and respecting people's differences. Give the students a specific time to upload a drawing of themselves that shows aspects of their identity (e.g., physical traits, identity groups to which they belong, talents, hobbies, etc.). All of the self-portraits can then be collected and put together to create a PowerPoint, video or page to be shared with the school and community.

Supporting ADL Resource/Lesson Plan: https://www.adl.org/education/educator-resources/lesson-plans/who-am-i-identity-poems

WHEN I GROW UP (VIRTUAL ADAPTATION)

Grade level: Elementary School

Over video chat, lead a discussion about stereotypes using ADL’s “Mo’Ne Davis and Gender Stereotypes” lesson plan (link below). As an extension to the lesson, ask students to think about ways in which stereotypes impact how people treat each other in their school. Are kids of different genders treated differently? Are students treated differently on the basis of race? If so, how are they treated differently and why do you think that is? Ask students to share a time that they were discouraged from doing something because of an aspect of their identity and the stereotypes people have of that identity group. Finish the activity by asking each student to draw a picture of possible jobs/professions they’re interested in pursuing when they grow up. Encourage them to think big, even if it’s something that society says, due to stereotypes, they shouldn’t be.

“HUMANS OF ...” INSTAGRAM CAMPAIGN (VIRTUAL ADAPTATION)

Grade level: Middle School/High School

This activity was inspired by the “Humans of New York” campaign. Over video chat, lead group discussions with students about different aspects of identity (e.g., race, religion, language, gender/gender identity, sexual orientation, etc.). Following this discussion, create a student-led team. Students on the team will be responsible for doing video or text interviews with other students about aspects of their identities. They will then post one of those interviews daily, with an accompanying picture, on your school’s Instagram (or whatever social media your school prefers). Interviewers should encourage people to share an aspect of their identity that makes them unique and proud, and can also include the variety of languages represented at your school, where appropriate. Be sure to get permission from students to post, and monitor the account to respond to any negative or biased feedback.

LISTENING JOURNAL (VIRTUAL ADAPTATION)

Grade level: Middle School/High School

Have students keep a listening journal for one week. Throughout that week, as they listen to the people in their lives and to messages in the media (including social media), have them record examples of stereotypes, bias and discrimination that they experience, see and hear about. Over video chat, lead a discussion about their observations and the impact on their school (or online or community) culture. In response, have students create an Ally Board on your distance learning platform to share allyship strategies that students and staff can use to challenge the biased attitudes and behaviors that impact their school.

INTENTIONAL ACTS OF RESPECT (VIRTUAL ADAPTATION)
Grade level: Middle School/High School

Respect can mean many things to many people; the Oxford English Dictionary defines it as “the consideration for the feelings, wishes, rights or traditions of others.” Over video chat, lead a discussion around the topic of respect. What is it? What does it look like? What does it feel like? Follow this discussion with an opportunity for students to rate how respectful their school is by dragging a slider on a digital platform like Google Forms between “Disrespectful” and “Respectful.” Share the results of the informal survey and ask students to share their experiences and explain why they chose the point on the meter that they did. Continue the conversation by asking students to brainstorm ways that people can show respect at their school. As a follow-up, invite students to recognize Intentional Acts of Respect by recording respectful acts they have seen at school (without identifying individual students or staff) and submitting via email, online form or survey. Shout out some of the submissions on school social media. Monitor the comments for respectful interaction.

MAKING THE INVISIBLE VISIBLE (VIRTUAL ADAPTATION)
Grade level: High School

Using the lesson below, lead a discussion on video chat about the ways in which LGBTQ people, events, accomplishments and issues have been less visible or made invisible in mainstream accounts of history. Explore the impact of invisibility on people and how different groups have been historically marginalized in society. Then, engage students in a discussion about people who may feel invisible in their school. Be sure to focus on general identity characteristics (e.g., sexual orientation, immigration status, gender identity, etc.) rather than specific individuals. Based on this discussion, ask students to sign up to be interviewed if they feel like an aspect of their identity needs more visibility. Help students create interview questions. Decide how the interviews will be recorded (e.g., audio, video, etc.) and compile the completed interviews into your school’s own StoryCorps library.

The Pyramid of Hate Mini-Lesson

The Pyramid of Hate is a useful tool to help understand how words, jokes and stereotypes can normalize behaviors and discrimination that manifest in more systematic incidents of bias, discrimination and oppression. Bias at each level reflects a system of oppression that negatively impacts individuals, institutions and society.

It also illustrates how bias and hate can intensify when they are not challenged and when they are “normalized.” This activity provides an opportunity for students to reflect on individuals’ biases and on how they can address and interrupt the escalation of bias and hate in their school and community.

The Pyramid of Hate is not designed to suggest a ranking of how serious each level of thinking and/or behavior is. Rather, it demonstrates that when people accept one level of behavior, it becomes easier to accept behaviors on the level above as “normal.” This normalization process has the potential to continue up the pyramid; in fact, the most violent and horrific manifestations of prejudice at the top of the pyramid had their beginnings in the thinking described at the lower levels. A primary function of the Pyramid of Hate is to provide an impetus for challenging all manifestations of bias and discrimination by motivating action in response to behaviors many see as subtle or insignificant.

Check out some of our other digital mini-lessons! These are great resources to start planning school-wide No Place for Hate activities for in-person and virtual learning environments.

Policy Recommendations

Creating a Safe, Inclusive and Equitable School Climate Policy

Although No Place for Hate serves as a declaration of a school’s commitment to fostering an inclusive and equitable school climate, it is important that the school have a clear policy that defines what an equitable school climate is and what the expectations are to help reach that goal.

Check your school district policies and offer suggestions, if needed. Feel free to use this sample as inspiration or modify it in whichever way helps meet the needs of your school: https://www2.ed.gov/offices/OCR/archives/pdf/AppA.pdf/.

In addition to creating an inclusive and equitable school climate policy, it is also important to communicate the value of and commitment to this policy. Feel free to use the sample language below or modify as needed.
Sample Position Statement for an Inclusive and Equitable School Climate Policy

Research indicates that a safe, inclusive and equitable school climate translates into safer, more engaging and supportive school communities. How students and staff feel about a school’s culture impacts other key indicators of success, including academic achievement and teacher retention.

School climate refers to how students and staff feel about the social and environmental factors that make up their school culture (e.g., rules, policies, teaching, pedagogy, etc.). [Name of School] commits to developing and maintaining a respectful, inclusive and equitable school climate that is reflected in classrooms and common areas free from bias and bullying behavior; clearly stated expectations about each individual’s responsibility in challenging bias and bullying; and curricula that reflect the diversity of the student population and the society in which we live. Without this, students will not feel safe, welcomed, challenged and supported.

All members of the school community, including students, staff, administrators and family members, are expected to serve as role models by demonstrating ally behavior, implementing culturally responsive pedagogy and respecting other students and staff.

[Name of School] will not accept any form of bias, harassment, discrimination, bullying or intimidation that would interfere with a respectful, inclusive and equitable school climate. If such an incident does take place, the school will address the issue with the individual(s) and will use the moment to educate the school community.

Assessing School Climate

Evaluating your school’s climate is an important part of the No Place for Hate process. The climate survey is an optional tool that schools can use to examine their areas of need as it relates to bias and bullying. Below is a sample self-assessment tool No Place for Hate committees can use to do this important work and assist committees in identifying areas of need to focus on for the activities they plan for the school year.

If your school is looking for additional survey tools, we have also attached links below specifically for elementary, middle and high schools.

ADDITIONAL ADL EDUCATION RESOURCES
Expanding Your Impact

ADL Education Workshop Programs

ADL Education provides high-quality educational programs and curriculum resources to assist school communities in combating bias, bullying and bigotry. These workshop programs are a great way to kick off No Place for Hate at your school as they provide foundational lessons on how to create a more inclusive learning environment for all students. All workshops can be done either in person or in a virtual learning environment. Please contact your local ADL regional office to learn more about how the following workshops for educators, administrators, students and family members can supplement your No Place for Hate goals.

Anti-Bias Training (for students in grades 4–12 and/or educators)

This program provides workshops that facilitate the exploration of personal identity in students, educators and/or family members with the goals of understanding language and culture, examining bias and developing plans to challenge bias in an effort to improve the overall climate of their school.

Breaking Down Bias: Championing Equitable and Inclusive Classrooms (for educators)

This online four-week course takes educators on an anti-bias learning journey that empowers them to be agents of change in their classrooms and schools. Educators learn about the core pillars of anti-bias learning; reflect on how identity and language play a role in perspective, bias and belonging; analyze the origins and impacts of bias and develop strategies for challenging bias in themselves, their classrooms and their schools.

Bullying/Cyberbullying Prevention Training

These bullying/cyberbullying prevention programs for students, educators and family members provide innovative skills and strategies to help schools prevent and intervene against name-calling, bullying and cyberbullying as part of a broader strategy to create safe and equitable schools for all students.

Peer Training/Peer Leadership (for students in grades 6–12)

This nationally recognized program enables students to become leaders and agents of change in their schools and communities by facilitating conversations about bias, discrimination and bullying with their peers.

Anti-Bias Education Curriculum

www.adl.org/anti-bias-curriculum

ADL’s anti-bias curriculum guides for educators provide standards-aligned sequential lessons to help students in grades K–12 build a strong foundation for analyzing and confronting bias. The curriculum guides are designed to help educators and students explore ways to ensure that the principles of respect for diversity, freedom and equity become reality.
Anti-Bias Curriculum Training

This training, offered at three different levels (elementary, middle and high school), provides an opportunity for educators to explore anti-bias education and how to implement these concepts in the classroom. The training includes curriculum guides that provide standards-aligned lesson plans that follow a scope and sequence throughout the school year.

Antisemitism Education Resources

BINAH (Building Insights to Navigate Antisemitism and Hate)
https://everfi.com/courses/k-12/binah/

This is a digital course developed in partnership with the ADL and Everfi that motivates students in grades 9–12 to identify as global citizens with respect for all people, regardless of the makeup of their school community. Topics include the impact of antisemitic attacks on American society as a whole, the vast diversity of modern Jewish life, and how to be a strong ally. The first-person narrative storyline will help students to understand the history of antisemitism and connect past events with those happening in the present.

Explore Holocaust Education Curriculum and Resources

Echoes and Reflections Curriculum and Workshops

ADL’s Holocaust Education can also be a helpful tool for schools looking to explore lessons related to challenging antisemitism and other forms of bias. There are valuable pieces of curriculum and online learning opportunities that allow students to apply important lessons learned in challenging bias based on the events of the Holocaust. To learn more about our Echoes and Reflections curriculum and courses, visit the website at https://echoesandreflections.org/.

ADL Education’s Incident Response

If your school experiences an incident of bias or hate, please complete ADL’s Incident Response Form available at https://www.adl.org/reportincident/ for additional support. We will do our best to investigate your situation and respond to you quickly. You will be contacted by your local ADL regional office.

When such an incident takes place, ADL is available to help you address the issue and provide ongoing education and assistance to help prevent future incidents. Below is a structure and approach to assist your preparation for responding to bias incidents in their immediate aftermath and to promote inclusive school climates with education.
Responding to Incidents of Hate and Bias

Best Practices for School Administrators

In recent years, we have seen alarming images, hateful language and bias incidents in K–12 schools. The most effective responses to bias-motivated incidents are holistic and incorporate preventions, interventions and consequences as well as long-term educational strategies. Below are approaches to assist you in being prepared to respond to bias incidents in their immediate aftermath and to promote inclusive school climates with education.

PREPARE

Be ready for incidents so that you can act quickly when something happens.

- Update policies on bullying and harassment and other in-person and online violations. Make sure policies explicitly prohibit incidents motivated by bias, are inclusive of all students and clearly outline consequences that are enforced universally.
- Ensure that school discipline policies limit reliance on exclusion strategies and that alternatives such as positive behavioral interventions and supports are tried first.
- Regularly review policies with all members of the school community and publicize them in various ways (e.g., on notice boards, in electronic and hard copy newsletters) and in families’ home languages.
- Develop a data collection protocol consistent with local, state and federal standards so that the prevalence and types of incidents can be tracked and patterns can be analyzed and addressed.
- Build relationships with community organizations and partners, law enforcement, media and other relevant stakeholders. These relationships can enhance your ability to respond rapidly and comprehensively to an incident.

ENCOURAGE REPORTING

Young people are very often reluctant to tell adults about incidents because they believe it won't help and may make things worse.

- Establish safe and confidential reporting mechanisms and clear procedures for investigation and response. Enacting policies that address protection for those who report incidents will ensure that they don't experience retaliation or unnecessary interaction with law enforcement. Be aware of possible false reports and consider what to do if they occur.
- Make students aware of these systems and encourage them to tell a trusted adult when they experience, witness or hear about an incident.
- With adults, discuss best practices for being more approachable. Take reported issues seriously, invest the time to listen before engaging in problem-solving, maintain confidentiality when appropriate and model responsible in-person and online behavior.
- Reaffirm your school as a “sanctuary” or “safe zone” school by reinforcing existing laws, policies and constitutional rights that protect immigrant students from federal immigration enforcement activity at school. Ensuring safety and inclusion for vulnerable students will encourage reporting.
ACT QUICKLY AND RESPOND

Every reported incident should be responded to in a serious manner that reassures the school community and conveys a message that the behavior is unacceptable.

- Employ a standardized bias incident response form to guide and document information-gathering after an incident does occur.
- Immediately upon learning of the incident, preserve photos, screenshots, etc. Interview all parties separately and collect written accounts as soon as possible.
- Gather facts with an eye toward the bigger picture at the school. Ask students whether other similar incidents have happened; listen to concerns and feedback about school climate.
- Clarify what the role and duties of school resource officers (SROs) and police should and should not be in the process. Contact law enforcement as necessary.
- Ensure the safety of all students and determine disciplinary response, if appropriate.
- On a need-to-know basis, determine the extent to which mental health, social service providers and other victim resources should be consulted.

COMMUNICATE

Ensure that all stakeholders and members of the school community understand reporting procedures. When an incident occurs, keep the school community informed.

- Communicate with all members of the school community and tailor your message depending on the audience (i.e., students, staff, families, and the wider community). Initial communication should (1) describe the nature of the incident (e.g., swastika on the bathroom wall), (2) denounce the act and affirm the inclusive values of your school, (3) announce an immediate investigation of the matter when appropriate and (4) share resources for students and families impacted by the incident, including social services and plans for an educational response.
- Send regular updates and plans for short-term and long-term action to the various stakeholders.
- Ensure the protection of students’ privacy in any communications about the incident.

EDUCATE

In a regular and ongoing way, teach students about bias, its harmful effects and how to challenge it. Don’t wait for an incident to occur to talk about these important issues.

- Turn bias-motivated incidents into “teachable moments,” offer the opportunity to talk about bias and discrimination, and provide opportunities for students to take action.
- Provide opportunities for all members of the school community to discuss and process their thoughts and feelings around the incident.
- Educate all students who were involved in the incident, including aggressors or perpetrators. Sometimes young people who engage in bias-motivated behavior do not understand the meaning or impact of their actions on the larger school community. Educators, counselors and administrators should coordinate disciplinary, behavioral and educational interventions.
- Provide professional development for school personnel on how to lead discussions on the nature and impact of bias with students and families. Anti-bias education is a long-term process, and preventing bias requires an ongoing commitment from all stakeholders in the school community, including the school’s administrators. Integrate anti-bias and bullying prevention strategies into the school curriculum, school climate programs and family engagement.
- Support efforts to provide training for school resource officers on implicit bias and strategies that meet the varying needs of officers working with youth.

Definitions Related to Bias and Bullying

Elementary School

ALLYSHIP
An action where someone helps or stands up for someone who is being bullied or who is the target of bias.

BULLYING
When a person or a group behaves in ways—on purpose and repeatedly—that make someone feel hurt, afraid or embarrassed.

BYSTANDING
When a person or a group sees bullying or prejudice happen and does not say or do anything.

CULTURE
The patterns of daily life that can be seen in language, arts, customs, holiday celebrations, food, religion, beliefs/values, communication style, music, clothing and more that a group of people share.

DISCRIMINATION
Unfair treatment of one person or a group of people because of the person's or group's identity (e.g., race, gender, ability, religion, culture, etc.). Discrimination is an action that can come from prejudice.

INEQUALITY
An unfair situation when some people have more rights or better opportunities than other people.

INJUSTICE
A situation in which the rights of a person or a group of people are ignored, disrespected or discriminated against.

MULTICULTURAL
Including many different cultures.

NAME-CALLING
Using words to hurt or to be mean to a person or a group.

NONVERBAL COMMUNICATION
Aspects of communication that do not involve speaking (such as gestures and facial expressions); can also include nonverbal aspects of speech (tone and volume of voice, etc.).

PREJUDICE
Judging or having an idea about someone or a group of people before you actually know them. Prejudice is often directed toward people in a certain identity group (e.g., race, religion, gender, etc.).
STEREOTYPE
The false idea that all members of a group are the same and that they think and behave in the same way.

TEASING
Laughing at and putting someone down in a way that is either friendly and playful or mean and unkind.

Middle & High School

PART I. GENERAL TERMS

Find a full list of terms at ADL’s Education Glossary Terms: www.adl.org/education/resources/glossary-terms/education-glossary-terms

ANTI-BIAS
An active commitment to challenging bias in oneself, others and institutions.

BIAS
An inclination or preference either for or against an individual or group that interferes with impartial judgment.

BIGOTRY
An unreasonable or irrational attachment to negative stereotypes and prejudices of individuals or groups belonging to one or more social identities.

CULTURE
The patterns of daily life learned consciously and unconsciously by a group of people. These patterns can be seen in language, governing practices, arts, customs, holiday celebrations, food, religion, relationships, family roles, communication style, clothing, etc.

DIVERSITY, EQUITY AND INCLUSION (DEI)
Broadly outlined institutional policies, procedures and practices to foster safety, respect, belonging, access and representation for all. These initiatives are designed to create an inclusive environment for all and address inequities for individuals with marginalized identities.

DISCRIMINATION
The denial of justice, resources and fair treatment of individuals and groups (often based on social identity) through employment, education, housing, banking, political rights, etc.

DIVERSITY
Different or varied. The population of the United States is made up of people belonging to diverse groups characterized by culture, race, ethnicity, nationality, gender, sexual orientation, ability, etc.
MULTICULTURAL
Many or multiple cultures. The United States is multicultural because its population consists of people from many different cultures.

PREJUDICE
A premature judgment or belief formed about a person, group or concept before gaining sufficient knowledge or by selectively disregarding facts.

SCAPEGOATING
Blaming an individual or group for something based on that person or group’s identity when the person or group is not responsible. Bias, prejudicial thinking, and discriminatory acts can lead to scapegoating.

STEREOTYPE
An oversimplified generalization about a person or group of people without regard for individual differences. Even seemingly positive stereotypes that link a person or group to a specific positive trait can have negative consequences.

PART II. TERMS SPECIFIC TO NAME-CALLING AND BULLYING

Bullying is a behavior. Because of this, ADL encourages educators to use language that describes students’ behavior rather than the student themselves (e.g., “the student who bullied” rather than “the bully,” “the student who was targeted” rather than “the target”). By focusing on behavior, we avoid sending the message that a student’s behavior cannot change, and we acknowledge that one person can exhibit multiple behaviors in different bullying situations. Below are the behaviors individuals may exhibit in incidents of bullying.

ALLYSHIP
A behavior where someone speaks out on behalf of someone else or takes actions that are supportive of someone who is targeted by bias or bullying, either themselves or someone else.

BULLYING
Intentional repeated actions or threats of action that are designed to cause fear, distress or harm directed toward a person by one or more people who have (or are perceived to have) more power or status than their target. Behavior is not considered bullying if it occurs once with no intention of gaining power (e.g., bumping into someone, telling a joke once, not playing with someone, etc.); still, it is important that all mean behavior be addressed in a timely and appropriate way.

BYSTANDING
Observing bullying behavior without supporting or confronting it. Many students take the role of bystander out of fear of being bullied themselves or because they do not know how to support the one who is being bullied.

CYBERBULLYING
The intentional and repeated mistreatment of others through the use of technology such as computers, cell phones and other electronic devices.

NAME-CALLING
The use of language to defame, demean or degrade individuals or groups.
Creating an Anti-Bias Learning Environment

Talking with Students about Diversity and Bias

It is important for teachers to think about how they can most effectively raise the complex issues of identity, bias, stereotypes, exclusion and injustice with their students. To prepare to discuss these issues in the classroom, teachers should attempt to integrate the following practices into their classroom curricula.

SELF-EXPLORATION
Provide students with opportunities for the examination of personal cultural biases and assumptions.

COMPREHENSIVE INTEGRATION
Integrate culturally diverse information/perspectives into all aspects of teaching.

TIME AND MATURATION
Allow time for a process to develop. Introduce less complex topics at first and allow the time it takes to establish trust.

ACCEPTING ENVIRONMENT
Establish an environment that allows for mistakes. Assume goodwill and make that assumption a common practice in the classroom.

INTERVENTION
Be prepared to respond to intentional acts of bias. Silence in the face of injustice conveys the impression that prejudicial behavior is condoned or not worthy of attention.

LIFELONG LEARNING
Keep abreast of current anti-bias education issues and discuss them with students.

DISCOVERY LEARNING
Avoid “preaching” to students about how they should behave. Provide opportunities for students to resolve conflicts, solve problems, work in diverse teams and think critically about information.

LIFE EXPERIENCES
Provide opportunities for students to share life experiences; choose literature that will help students develop empathy.
RESOURCES REVIEW
Review materials so that classroom displays and bulletin boards are inclusive of all people.

HOME-SCHOOL-COMMUNITY CONNECTION
Involve parents, other family members and other community members in the learning process.

EXAMINE THE CLASSROOM ENVIRONMENT
What is present and absent in the school classroom provides children with important information about who and what is important.
